

Abstract of the Disclosure

A novel method and apparatus is described for reducing the number of CDMA codes for a constellation of multiple transponder platforms serving a number of subscribers in the same service area. A coherent processing technique synchronizes the phase of CDMA signals arriving at a subscriber from multiple transponder platforms to increase the code capacity and thus the number of possible subscribers for most of the multiple transponder platform systems in current use.

00000000000000000000000000000000